Apocalyptic & post-apocalyptic: Often the story begins (or makes reference to) our current contemporary reality as a contrast to life during or after the apocalyptic catalyst. May be man-made, such as nuclear warfare; medical, like a plague; or something fantastical, like zombies. The story might include attempts to prevent the apocalypse event, deal with the impact and consequences of the event itself, or after the catastrophe as society is maintained or redeveloped. Example: The Walking Dead

Atmospheric: These books evoke the story's setting, whether it's a gothic mansion or a small Midwestern town

Bleak: The outlook of these books is dark, frequently devoid of faith in human nature and tending away from hope or optimism

Character-driven: Interior growth and development of characters is an important element in these books.

Compelling: Incorporating a variety of narrative techniques, from foreshadowing to frequent changes in perspective, these gripping books have a powerful effect on readers, drawing them irresistibly into the story.

High fantasy: Subgenre of fantasy. Set in an entirely fictitious world. Example: Game of Thrones

Paranormal romance: Subgenre of romance. The story is focused on the relationships between characters as the main plot but there are also supernatural forces involved. Example: Vampire Diaries

Plot-driven: In these books, events rather than characters propel the story forward.

Urban fantasy: Subgenre of fantasy. Has a realistic setting and often takes place in the present day but also includes supernatural elements. Example: Supernatural (television show)
